Mentoring Across the Career Continuum

Professional Learning Pathways for Teacher Growth, Collaboration, & Legacy

Every teacher deserves mentoring—not just at the beginning of their career, but throughout their professional life.

Schools today face growing challenges in teacher recruitment, retention, and leadership development. Yet every district already possesses one of its greatest assets: the collective wisdom and experience of its educators. Over the course of my career, I have gained an important insight.

Most districts have mentoring. Few have a mentoring system.

Mentoring in Action helps districts build a mentoring system that supports educator growth, well-being, leadership, and flourishing across the career continuum. When mentoring spans the teaching journey, teachers thrive, leaders emerge, schools retain teachers, and students reap the rewards.

The Career Continuum Mentoring Framework

Where do you begin?

Every district begins from a different place. Begin your journey by exploring the three pathways and reflect on your unique needs and your goals for supporting all educators. Together, we can review your next steps to invest in a mentoring system that supports educators across the career continuum.
